

Why You Need To Know The Truth About Setting Up The Best Home Theater System!

By Dean Caporella

The best home theater system in the world will cost you a fortune, that's a given! Truth is, you don't need to spend a fortune. Problem with many potential home theater enthusiasts is they are waiting for the right time to set up.

There is no right time! Your best home theater won't suddenly show up. You have to get it going. Now is a great time to get started because pricing has never been so good.

Apart from the vast array of home theater components available at the major department stores, opportunities to purchase equipment online has opened up a whole new world for buyers which inevitably has led to greater competition for the buyer's dollar. This means better deals for you so if you've been thinking of "taking the plunge" now is as good a time as any.

The Basics Of Home Theater

Today, home theater requires four basic components.

- The television, either LCD or Plasma. Size is important. Many enthusiasts suggest at least a 40 inch tv. After all, to recreate a cinema atmosphere you want to have as big a screen as possible.
- A DVD player. Many people are still using old VCR's however, to move to the next level then you should be considering a DVD. Their ability to store more data and to encode digital signals produces a much clearer picture while multiple channel sound data makes them much more effective as a recording and playback device.
- A receiver for decoding channels feeding the relative speakers during your playback session.
- Speakers however, for full home theater effect, the days of speakers either side of the television are gone. In this scenario, 4-6 speakers is desired for surround sound effect.

Price Of Home Theater

It's difficult to suggest a specific price for your best home theatre set up. Everyone has different tastes and different budgets. Each one of the components listed above provide an effective cinema-style scenario when all working in unison.

For between $1500-3000, you are working at the lower end of the price range but don't be fooled; there are some excellent bargains to be picked up in this price range. The higher you go, the less choice you need to make. The bottom price rung is an extremely competitive market and sellers are normally happy to do deals. The options decrease the higher the price as the market isn't as large.

It's important to remember, setting up the best home theater system in the world isn't a race. It's a step-by-step process. Technology changes rapidly and there are new and better options coming onto the market all the time. The other thing to consider is brand choice. It's a little like shopping for cars: people have their preferences and will be loyal to a particular brand.

Once you have the basics to your home movie set up established, then it's time to think about accessories... but that's for another time!

Dean Caporella is a professional broadcaster. Learn the four essential components of the best home theater system. We'll give you some handy tips what you need plus, get the latest home theater tips and tricks at: <http://www.hometheaterinfo.com>

Home Theater

{mos_sb_discuss:2}